Service overview

fortitudo.agency

You have a starting point. Now it needs a considered finish.

For a website or content that is close, but still feels generic, inconsistent or difficult to use.

If the foundation needs replacing, we'll explain why a repair is not enough.

Design that could belong to anyone

Generic layouts and inconsistent branding weaken the character of the work.

Copy that does not say enough

Repetition and vague language obscure the business and its offer.

A journey that breaks down

The pages look complete, but the mobile layout, forms or next steps fall short.

Improve the work you have with a defined repair scope.

A review of what to preserve and what needs attention

A representative correction to establish the direction

The design, writing and development repairs in your proposal

Rechecked pages or content, with revised files or the updated site

Why work with us.

Preserve the work that holds up

We inspect the pages, copy and customer journeys before deciding what needs to change.

See the direction before wider changes

A representative correction gives you something concrete to review before the remaining repairs.

Check the result in use

We recheck affected pages and journeys and preserve your business facts as the work is revised.

From the first conversation to a clear handover.

01 Inspect the existing work and record what needs attention.

02 Agree a repair scope and a representative correction.

03 Complete the design, writing and development changes.

04 Recheck affected journeys and hand over the revised work.

First checkpoint: review one representative correction before applying the direction across the remaining scope.

A working result, checked together.

We agree what success looks like before delivery, then review the work against it.

The agreed design and editorial issues are resolved in context.

Claims and business facts are preserved or flagged for your review.

Affected pages and customer journeys are rechecked after the changes.

Preserve the foundation. Repair the experience.

Inspect before replacing

We review the actual pages, copy, code and customer journeys. The first decision is what to preserve, what to repair and whether any part needs a rebuild.

Website repair

Information structure, typography, spacing, visual hierarchy, brand consistency, mobile layouts, forms and connected journeys. The work is scoped around observable defects and the intended experience.

Set a clear standard for the writing and the work.

Content repair

Rewrite generic or repetitive website and business copy for a defined audience. Improve structure, terminology and specificity while preserving your facts, conditions and voice.

Claims and factual questions

Identify statements that need evidence, qualification or removal. We do not invent customer stories, authority signals or results to make the work more persuasive.

Representative correction

Establish the direction on a meaningful part of the work before applying it more widely. Inspect the result in its actual context, then complete the remaining agreed scope.

Start at the right scale.

Unslop your website

A scoped design, content and functional repair of an inspected website.

Unslop your content

Editorial repair of an agreed set of pages or documents, with factual questions retained.

A clear scope before the work begins.

What we need from you

The current site or documents, source access where relevant, brand references, approved business facts and one reviewer who can resolve factual questions.

What shapes the scope

Condition of the existing work · Pages or content volume · Design, writing and functional repairs

Scope and responsibilities

New branding, major backend replacement, original research and additional integrations are separate scopes. We do not promise AI-detector scores, search rankings or revenue outcomes.

Your written proposal confirms price, timing, responsibilities, review points and final inclusions.

Before you decide.

Will you keep the parts that already work?

Yes. The review establishes what is worth keeping before the repair scope is set. A new build is not assumed.

Can you work on content without rebuilding the website?

Yes. Content repair is a separate option for an agreed set of pages or documents, preserving your facts and voice while improving structure and clarity.

Let's review the work.

Send the site or content and tell us where it falls short. We'll inspect it and recommend a repair scope, or explain why it needs a rebuild.
